The gray dawn lighted the way of seven teen pedestrians in the Madison Square goas-you-please this morning. The early vis-tor found Jimmy Albert, the favorite for three days, still leading the weary procession about the sawdust ellipse.

A close observer would have said that the handsome fellow was in as good feather as at any time since the start. His good wife re-He had not been off the track since midnight, when his score stood at 348 miles. Panchot at that hour had covered 842 miles: Herty, 332; Guerrero, 330, and Golden 300, while Hart was asleep. Thus Albert was only five miles behind Charlie Rowell's record in the race which he won in 1882, and was shead of race which he won in 1882, and was ahead of Fitzgerald for the same time in his great race of 1884.

Sinclair and Cox were out of the race officially soon after midnight. Taylor, the piesater; Tilly, the Canadian dominie, Merritt Stout, the "Arab" from West Twenty-Seventh street, and Sam Day, with his "Oh, Mary!" went to bed at 1 o'clock. They were still sweetly sleeping the sleep of the just played-out at 7 o'clock this morning, their hope of ever reaching a figure big enough to give them a share in the divide being gone.

The race had narrowed down at breakfast time to the original favorites.

The crowd at daybreak was gone and the 160 spectators in the Garden were sober and quiet, the beer stands having been closed since 1 o'clock—for the first time during the race.

The failure of the beer had a somnolent effect on the little gathering of the faithful all through the night, and incidents of interest were scarce. There was a small "ruction" at 3 o'clock, but no casualties, and shortly after the only female in the audience emitted a sort of wail. She was carried out. Nobody seemed to know the cause of the wail nor the large of the "wailer."

seemed to know the cause of the wall nor the name of the "wailer."

At 6 o'clock Horace Weston, the famous, and his banjo, became apparent in the big parilion. The colored man dexterously picked the strings for the benefit of Dan Herty, who had reached third place and was a good leader of Guerrero, his nearest follower. Weston ran inside the fence to keep up with his favorite while he played. Herty's spirits rose as he gratefully thanked his Afterwards Jimmie Albert, who can thumb a breakdown, borrowed the banjo and played as he ran for two laps. The little crowd of spectators cheered enthusiastically.

Frank Hart, the steady-go colored boy, was in excellent form at daybreak, although he had been off and on the track at short intervals during the whole night, and had lost his place ahead of Herty.

A. M. in sleep. He looked weary when recalled to the track. Herty slept two hours from 1 o'clock, and Guerrero put in tree hours and a half, while two hours did for Golden.

Albert was slowly but surely creeping up upon the record of Charlie Rowell in the 1882 race, and interest in the result at the seventy-ninth hour (7 o'clock) was exciting. People crowded about the scorers and were informed that at 6.45 Albert lacked a mile and six laps of Rowell's seventy-ninth-hour score. Some one told the plucky boy and he immediately broke into a run. He showed up splendidly. He lifted his feet with a remarkable spring, his knees doubling with a wonderfully limber grace, considering the work that he had done since Sunday at midnight. Sure enough, to use the expression of a "profeah," "his feet were as clean as a haby's." There was not a blister on them and so t a twitch of pain in any joint. He was as clean as a racehorse. He made the mile in eight minutes and ten seconds.

The spectators cheered wildly, and the pedal expert renewed his speed for another half mile to "Marching Through Georgia" and "Suance River" by the orchestra, and then walked in, making Rowell's 375 miles laps at 6.56.56 amid the wildest enthusiasm.

The result of the six hours of pledding from midnight to 6 o'clock this morning, may be found in the subjoined schedule:

Then Albert retired for a little rest. He had surpassed Fitzgerald's record for that hour in his 610-mile race of 1884 by more than nine miles and was in excellent condition.

Parson Tilly slept six hours and eleven minutes and returned to the track at 8.16 o'clock this morning, although why he returned to his hopeless task is one of the conundrums which must be referred to himself as the funniest end man on earth, for he had only 200 miles to his credit, of which 103 miles were made in the first twenty-four hours. He hobbled at the rate of about two miles an hour, and with apparent distress.

Inquiries for Manager Hall at his office in the Garden this morning were met with an announcement that he had gone to Jefferson Market Police Court to appear against Louis Waldron, who had "punched" him at about 1.30 o'clock this morning. The circumstances of the affair, as related by people who were present are that Waldron asked Manager Hall for complimentary tickets. Mr. Hall replied gruffly and Waldron struck him with his fist, flooring him. Policemen took Waldron into custody before the trouble went any further.

In the Jefferson Market Police Court Waldron said that he was an advertising agent. He was held in $300 bail for trial.

Poor old Stout, the Arabian artist with the whitewash I rush, was pulled out of his cot by his friends at 10.25, just eleven hours after his retirement. He walked on eggs for two laps. The little crowd cheered and guyed the poor fellow, whereupon he broke into a run like that of a lame camel. The crowd cheered hilariously, and the Arabthus stimulated caught up with and passed the leaders, who were running at the dog trot which they have kept up for two days.

Frank Dole, of Philadelphia, the man who managed George Littlewood in America on his last visit, is negotiating with W. A. Hoagland for a match at heel and toe for six days. William Corney is anxious to made the race a three-cornered sweepstakes for $1,000 a corner, with Joe Scott, the Australian champion, now in England, as his entry. The race, if made, will be open to others outside of the special sweepstakes. Hoagland favors the idea. Mr. Dole is considering the proposition.

ARSON TO PAY A DEBT

An Alleged Conspiracy to Defraud Insurance Companies.

Arrest of a Broadway Merchant as the Chief Plotter.

Moses Strauss Charged With Having Arranged to Increase the Insurance and Then Burn the Store of a Bowery Tailor Who Could Not Pay a Debt-Extraordinary Statements Made to Inspector Byrnes-Warned to Get the Women and Inspector Byrnes made public this morning the details of what he believes is an extraordinary conspiracy to defraud insurance companies. He worked on the case six weeks and this morning some of his detectives arrested Moses Strauss, a dealer in tailors' trimmings at 508 Broadway, on a charge of conspiracy to defraud.

Strauss was taken to Police Headquarters and locked up there pending further investigation. It seems that he has a criminal record, inasmuch as he served seven years in state prison for having received stolen goods. Yesterday the Inspector submitted the facts he had gathered to Police Justice White, and the latter issued a warrant, upon which Strauss was arrested.

The chief witness is Jacob Samuels, a member of the firm of Samuels & Brother, tailors at 246 Bowery, and living at 225 East

Forty-nint street.

In an affidavit made to Inspector Byrnes Samuels says that he has known Strauss since 1882. He had succeeded-in running up a bill in the latter's house amounting to about

$1,900. In the latter part of 1887 Strauss came to him and told him that he did not think that him and told him that he did not think that Samuels would be ever prepared to pay him, and that he wanted the money badly right off. The tailor replied that he could not give Strauss any money yet, as he was very poor. "But," said Strauss, "you can pay it very easily if you follow my advice."

"How?" asked Samuels.

"Why, let the place go off," was the reply.

"I don't understand you," Samuels said, and asked for an explanation.

Strauss then asked him how much insurance he had, and Samuels replied about $3,500. The merchant told him to get $6,000 more on, and that he would attend to the rest.

The next day a surveyor for an insurance company called on Samuels and said he had been sent by D. L. Praeger, an agent. He looked over the stock and refused to take the risk.

Samuels then called on Strauss and asked what all this meant. The latter replied that he had sent to Praeger, and that the latter was an agent on the Hoyal, London and Liverpool, Merohants, Rew York and Bowery companies.

companies.

On Jan. 7, last, Praeger peremptorily refused to have anything to do with the matter. On Jan. 9, Strauss told him that he would arrange things any way, and that Samuels had better call for Stern, an insurance agent at 118 or 181 Broadway, who would fix it all right.

Stern sent a surveyor of the Knickerbocker Insurance Company, who also refused to take the risk.

Next Mendell Steinthal, of 34 East Fourth street, was applied to by Strauss. Steinthal is an agent for several companies. Strauss told Samuels that if Steinthal could not "fix told samuels that it steinthal could not "ix" with the city companies he could with those out of town, Samuels says that Strauss paid one months' rent for the store and declared to Samuels that he had "fixed it" with Arnheim, the iandlord, so that if Samuels moved Arnheim would say that it was because of repairs to the building.

Then Strauss gave him $100 to pay his moving expenses, and on Feb. 1 he moved uptown.

Strauss next provided him with a complete set of old books, fully written up, which falsely showed that Samuels carried at the time the fire was to take place $12,000 worth of atock. This, Strauss explained, was to convince the insurance companies that there was no "snap game" going on.
Strauss then induced Samuels, it is alleged.

to make a sixty-day note to Steinthal for $300, payable at the Home Bank, and received in return three policies for the additional $6,000 in out-of-town companies.

Immediately after this transaction Strauss informed the tailor that he had better move the women and children out of his house, as there was "no telling when the thing might go up."

At this Samuels got scared, and the more he thought about it the more scared he got, until he went to Inspector Byrnes's office and until he went to Inspector Byrnes's office and told of the alleged conspiracy.

Samuels is now in a somewhat advantageous position, for probably he will not pay Strauss the $1,900 he owes him, and he has succeeded in getting $225 for rent and expenses out of the accused man.

Inspector Byrnes declares that he feels confident he can prove a case against Straus.

ISPECIAL CARLE TO THE WORLD.I LONDON, Feb. 9.-It was an anxious Parliament that opened to-day-the beginning of a long and fierce battle on the eternal Irish question which may end in a change of Ministry. Here is the Queen's speech :

Ministry.

Here is the Queen's speech:

My Lords and Gentlemen: I continue to receive from all the powers cordial assurances of triendly sentiments, as well as of an earnest desire to maintain the peace of the world.

Animated by a desire to prevent an effusion of blood I despatched a mission to the King of Abyssinia with the hope of dissuading him from engaging in war with Italy. I deeply regret that my efforts were not successful.

The deliberations of the conference at Washington to adjust questions which have arisen between Canada and America are still progressing.

The negotiations commenced in less in respect to the regulation of the Suzz Canal have been brought to a conclusion so far as the points of difference between myself and the French Republic are concerned. I have also entered into an agreement with France for the protection of life and property in the New Hebrides by a joint naval commission. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, the estimates for services for 1888 which will be laid before you have been framed with a due regard for economy. You will be asked to provide for the improvement of the defease of the ports and coshing stations rendered urgently necessary by the advance of military science and also to sanction an arrangement providing for a special squadron to protect Au-tralasian commerce, the cost of which will be partially brine by the colonies.

My Lords and Gentlemen, the measures which at great labor you pased lest session for the benefit of Ireland have been carefully carried into effect during the period since clapsed.
